- i. No definite opinion can be given as to whether the alleged accused in the case under reference (Name.....) had performed any recent sexual intercourse in the ordinary way and there is nothing to suspect about his potency (when the subject is potent and the penile washings do not show any vaginal epithelium)

- ii. The possibility of performance of sexual intercourse, ie, of vaginal penetration by the male sex organ of the subject under reference cannot be excluded (when the subject is potent and his penile washings show vaginal epithelium)
- iii. The subject (Name.....) in the case under reference is incapable of performing sexual intercourse in the ordinary way (if he is impotent, as found out on clinical examination)
